Love this book! The dynamic between the two main characters is so much fun. Plus the heroine swears a lot Gaelic which really adds to the dialogue. The mood and setting feel authentic, which was nice. The author has clearly spent a lot of time studying the period. The heroine is no shrinking violet and takes charge of her fate but terrible circumstances lead her down a different path. The hero is trouble, moody but kindhearted. So many authors fall down the rabbit hole of turning the hero into a jerk, but not our hero here. The backstory for both characters is fully realized and the secondary characters are well written. Overall this is a fun read that really sweeps you off to a different time and place.

Scottish borders, Gaira of Clan Colquhoun comes upon the village she was fleeing to to find it in ruins and only a few damaged children remaining, when Robert of Dent also comes upon the village, while he investigates what soldiers under his command have done, he offers to help her get to safety. Romance ensues.

Not a bad read.

During the reign of King Edward there existed a knight whose reputation earned him the name of Black Robert because of his deeds towards the Scots. After hearing of a carnage by some troops of the king's at Doonhill near Dumfries, Robert of Dent decides to go there to investigate the truth of the matter. Meanwhile, Gaira of Clan Colquhoun has already arrived at Doonhill in the hopes of escaping an arranged marriage planned by her brother only to find everyone slaughtered and the village burned to the ground! Her sister, her sister's husband, gone! Where is their daughter? Finding the toddler under a bureau, Gaira sets out to bury the dead at night so that the other children whom she's discovered don't see them when Robert of Dent arrives. She doesn't know who he is but forces him to help her bury the dead, then take them to the nearest village and then decides he needs to help her take them home. Of course nothing goes quite like it's planned and Robert is recognized, her betrothed showed up to claim her and upon arrival on clan lands, the brothers want to kill him!

What made this a great story is the backstory of each main character. They should have been mortal enemies but circumstances forced them together and Robert saw something in Gaira that he admired. Gaira, meanwhile, didn't know who he really was but saw a man she could depend upon. Even under adverse conditions, they were there for each other and when the truth came out, it didn't matter. Set against King Edward's campaign against the Scots, this is an entirely believable story.

A new author for me. Received her first three books of the Lovers and Legends series as Christmas gifts. Have enjoyed this book very much. Interesting characters set in a time when the world was changing too fast.

Enjoyed this book very much! Love the characters. Love this period in history. Always enjoy reading books from Gaelic and Celtic times.

I won this book from the goodreads giveaways. Usually im not a fan of romance books and wouldn't sign up to try to win one, But the setting(war torn scotland) and the history compelled me to give this one a try, and im so glad i did. I loved it. the characters are the single greatest part of the story, they are all so unique and well developed, i felt like i knew them all pretty quickly. Not only is the story completely satisfying, also, but it's got some humor in there as well. The main character Gaira to be more specific, who curses hilariously. Having 2 kids of my own, i also have to say that the young children were written wonderfully too. Bottom line, the story is satisfying and entertaining, the characters are well developed and motivated, and the setting is totally enchanting.

I was super nervous when I got this book out as it's based in Scotland like I am. Sometimes when it's not Scottish authors writing about a historical romance it doesn't always work.

Black Robert. The most feared of all King Edward's men...

I actually read In Debt to the Enemy Lord first. But I liked Robert more. Aye!

I love it when they are a bit of mysterious. And I could not not read this book with an accent.

This was the first book I have had the pleasure to read from author Nicole Locke and I absolutely loved it! I will definitely be reading her other books!

The Knight's Broken Promise is the first book in the Lovers and Legends Series. Robert of Dent is an English Knight fighting for King Edward in Scotland. Gaira of Clan Colquhoun is a young scottish woman who has run away from her betrothed to her sisters village. Robert and Gaira meet in the massacred village of Gaira's sister and oh my what a meeting...

This story was so much more than just a romance. Nicole did a wonderful job of pulling you into the story and I honestly had a hard time putting it down. I absolutely adored Robert & Gaira as a couple, two people who start out as enemies but under extremely harsh and unusual circumstances end up helping each other and eventually fall in love. With fascinating secondary characters, drama, humor and of course a fabulous romance this has everything you could want in a book. Highly recommend and look forward to reading the rest of the books in this series!
