Maybe because this is only 55 pages it just seems rushed and without real substance and things were thrown at us just to get to the HEA. Overall it was ok, but I really wanted more info about what happens with all the new things they found on the planet.

Oh my goodness this is really a different kind of read for me. I've never read this author writings before, so we will check out the next book. The way she wrote this story it was like I was right in the cave and the flowers and pools, I could see it all.

Lista is soldier from Earth, her family is from a lower class, they really needed money for their mother's surgery the only way she could get the money is to leave the military, then to go on a different planet and play the game. The game is of being hunted by Mazlans males to find there mates. But Lista was a soldier used to running and training, she had to make it in 3 days across the desert, mountains to the assigned mark on the map, if she made it she would be free and didn't have to pay the money back. Not knowing the terrain really slowed her down. Way down, would she get caught?

Razar was born on this planet, his parents were banished too, where all there money was confiscated but now him and his brother's lived in a new part and he just built a house for his mate. As the women were coming off the spaceship they didn't realize the males were watching them to pick who they want as there mate. Razar didn't want any of them but then he saw her, yes she was his mate and he won't share with anyone. Then on the hunt day he saw her taking off and knew he was going to have to work hard to get her. But she was worth it.

A copy of this book was provided to me with no requirements for a review. I voluntarily read this book and my comments here are my honest opinion.

Interesting

Quick short story about a planet of mostly males who need mates and the hunt to claim them. The series is mainly about one family of 10 males all looking for a mate. Razar as the eldest is First to hunt. Enjoyable.

Slow

Very slow, rather boring. Seems like first attempt at writing. Dialogue was natural and flowing, think this author will be better in future with a more in depth story line.

This is the first book I have read from this author. I was not disappointed. The writing was easy and the story was great. I will be finding more of Ms. Diva's books.

Razar

This book had fun characters and an enjoyable story line. My only complaint was it seemed a bit jumpy at times, not always transitioning smoothly. I did enjoy it, though, and want to read more in the series.

From Unwanted to Wanted

Given this book for an honest review.

What woman in her right mind signs up for a mating hunt? A desperate one that's who! The things I do for my family all I can do is try really hard not to get caught. I was in the military but it did not pay enough to take care of my family so a girl has to do what is necessary so my family does not suffer.

I was born on a penal colony it is all that I have know. My parents were sentenced because of their political beliefs but like here was not so bad. The mating games happen every quarter on my planet and I had intended to participate looking for a mate this quarter until I saw her walking down the ramp and I just knew she was the one for me. With nine other brothers at home waiting for their chance to get a mate I was glad there had been someone for me.

With Lista not wanting a mate and doing all in her power to avoiding it. Razar wanting a mate and willing to fight for her. Can these two make it work?

The story was short enjoyable read looking forward to reading about Lista's sister when she comes to Mazlan

Mandy Parmenter says

Lista needs money for an operation for her mother to save her life. Her spoilt lazy sister has volunteered her to go as a potential bride for an alien with an rather usual test for potential mates - if she wins the mating game she can go home and keep all of the money. Lista had to leave the army to do this with no change of re-enlisting so has plans to go back and start a new life/business - she has no intention of not winning the game.

Razar is one of a large family who needs to find a mate. Due to circumstances on their planet there are 9 males to 1 female so he needs to find one using the mating game with women sent from Earth as they seem to be compatible. Will he be able to catch Lista and will she be able to handle the secret of what he really is?

I loved this book. It was well told and I could imagine myself being there and seeing all of what was happening. Now I need to know what happens next, Definitely recommended.

I saw mentioned in previous reviews that it need to be proof read for errors however I did not come across any errors so I'm guess those have been fixed. I read a lot ARC for several indie authors and asked to give this book a try. So with that said here is my review.

I enjoyed the premise of the book very much and the story flowed nicely. The for a short story the main characters had a good bit of development, you got to see what their true personality was like. For what this book is supposed to represent I believe it was well written. I don't believe this book would be for everyone, because you have to like reading about futuristic dystopia, alien travel, and shape-shifters. So with that said if you like a combination of those above characteristics you should enjoy this short read into a little fantasy.

Shasha says

I had to reread the prologue because of awkward phrasing and run on sentences. I kept reading because I like the mars needs women trope. The rest of the story was in similar shape and I had to force myself to finish. I noticed inconsistencies as well. Too bad because I liked the story.

This needs to be edited and updated. The color purple is used to describe way too many things. Earth culture from this century is referenced often even though it is supposed to be hundreds of years in the future.

Good idea but Slightly disappointing

There was such a good idea behind this story I really thought it would be a great read, but it seems written by a novice author. It reads very simple, with no depth to the characters or situation, and skips forward in time too much without having the actual feel of time passing. Not horrible but could have been so much better!

Donna Hokanson says

Making a run from it

Razar is the eldest of ten brothers and the first to enter the mating game in hopes to find his mate. But she's only there because her sister talked and guilted her into doing it for the sake of her mother and brother. But she just got out of the military and plans on giving any man a run for his money. But as she tries to escape a wild beast she goes into a cove that is possible just a deadly as the beast she left outside. Well written and very entertaining story to read.
