Great book. It reminds me of Peter Pan, I actually think she took some things from Peter Pan, and added it into the story. Please like my comment if you think it is good and appropriate. Thank you! If you're wondering, I started July 24, 2014. I finished it today. If you're wondering why it took me so long, it took me a while to find the fourth book, Into the Mist, my favorite one! Now, thank you.

This collection of books is about two sisters, along with the older sisters two friends. These books are fun, but overall lack whimsy and suspense. They are pretty basic books, and while they are about the girls and their adventures in neverland with the fairies, the plots revolve more around the human characters and their cooperation (or noncooperation as the case may be at times) with each other. My daughter and I did have fun reading these books, they just aren't our favorite. They lack a certain spark.

Graciela is presently reading this series and is almost done book 2 (the series presently goes to book 12!!) She seems to really like the books and what I love about them is that they take her longer to read as there is more text, less pictures. So the 10 more books she has to read should take her a decent chunk of time instead of the few days other series can take. Graciela chose these books for herself from Calgary Reads Books Sale. She loves to 'collect' so was attracted to the full box set and then liked the theme of a group of girls going to Never Land. She likened the family aspect/girls age spread to the girl's in The Penderwicks.

This book was a lot of fun to read with my 5 year old. The characters are relateable and the adventure is exciting. I enjoyed that the fairies from the world of Tinkerbell were also in these books, it made the story even more relateable since the names were familiar. The illustrations were well done and helped keep my daughter focused.

My five-year-old daughter loves this series. The stories are interesting and age-appropriate (the target age group is 8+, but the books are accessible for younger children). I like how the four girls' personalities differ, and how the girls grow and become stronger through their adventures in Never Land. A great chapter-book series for young girls interested in fairies.

Congratulations!!
It's a good book, it's very interesting.

Elle says

They are so good it is about 4 girls that go to never land and have magical adventures

Ron says

This series of books is about some young girls who end up in Never Land where fairies live. They are easy to read chapter books that I suspect most beginning girl readers would enjoy.

Pamela says

"I liked it because they went on adventures in Neverland with the fairies. I also liked how the fairies would fit in doll's clothes."--Bryn, age 9

Louise White says

I have been reading these to my little girl. She likes Tinkerbell and has really enjoyed this extension to the films. A group of friends discover a way into Neverland and have a range of adventures with the well-known group of fairies. We are looking forward to starting the next set.
