"All in all, he held a satisfactory position, one where his talents were properly appreciated. But the Record-keeper, rubbing his bleary eyes as he began his shift, could not help but wish that the High Seeker had chosen a love-mate who was less loud."

This two-tale collection offers a humorous look at a romance between two men working in a royal prison.

"Wax." The Record-keeper of the Eternal Dungeon has always prided himself on his skills in procuring any object needed by his employers. But when the head torturer makes a seemingly innocent request for wax, the Record-keeper goes in search of a very special supply.

"Broken." What would happen if a technophobic torturer was plunged into the twenty-first century?

This collection of a short story and a work of flash fiction can be read on its own or as side stories in The Eternal Dungeon, a historical fantasy series set in a land where the psychologists wield whips.
