Betrayed is the sequel to Kelly Harper's Romance Short Story and Coming of Age Best Seller, The Professor.

There are those who struggle to find love. They search for it their whole life. Some of them find it, and some of them don't.

Kayla Ellis is not one of those people.

She's young and ambitious, and is falling desperately in love with her professor, Ethan. Her whole life has been dedicated to making a better life for her and her parents. But in one single night, her whole life was thrown off course.

Ethan has a little secret of his own, and when it's revealed, it threatens the very foundation of what they are trying to build together.

One chance encounter outside of a restaurant throws both Kayla and Ethan's lives into disarray. Both of them scramble to pull the pieces of themselves back together before they lose each other forever.

But who's Betrayed whom, in this finely woven tale of lost love and deceit?

Angel Cade says

First of all: Seriously? Are you fuckin' kidding me? That's the big climax of the book? (No innuendos, pervs)

I love a book that keeps me engrossed with the next word and the next and the next. I like the train of thoughts, dialogues, banter.

This book did not satisfy me in that regard. It jumped from a question to comment on weather to softness of the guy's lips. Seriously? >.>

But, meh, I guess Professor Ethan did it for me. I could live with that. And him. ;) And poor Trevor! I felt so freakin' bad for that boy! I hope he kicks it good if he makes an appearance in the next book.

On an end note, Dana can kiss my ass; Kayla... oh Kayla, Kayla! What am I gonna do with you? And Ethan, well, my, my, Professor. Feel free to enroll me in yer classes. *cheeky grin*

Anesha †Curious & Obsessive Bookworm† says

So... I'm actually glad to finish this book. :D

It was so annoying I felt like throwing my phone countless of times. :o

It dragged alot too D:

Maybe the title for this book was to be 'Immaturity At It's Finest' :D

First off:

Where the fuck is the Kayla from book 1?! This Kayla pissed me off so much! :D

She's suppose to be this straight forward girl, yet every damn thing her 'best friend' feeds her shit, she believes it.

She was so fucking immature I swear my eyes just automatically rolled EVERY damn time I picked back up this book.

Her friend lied to her and she's beating herself up over the distance growing between their friendship. If I had a man I loved, and my friend LIED to me about it, am not bout to be wondering how we can fix or friendship. I'd be calling her up and confronting her OR wondering how I should confront her when she gets home!

Also, if our friendship has to be conditioned then... trick..

Then her friend called her a slut. Like really? You're going around with condoms to be 'prepared' if anything happens and you got the nerve to call her a slut Dana?? The ridiculous thing about this whole thing is Kayla is like:

Maybe Dana was right - I was just a slut who couldn't control herself. What kind of person sacrifices their best friend for a guy?

When Kayla and Ethan got back together I was PRAYING they'd fuck at Dana's place. Just fuck, fuck fuck, and more fucking fuck! That's how much I hate Dana!

What kind of person does that to their "best friend?" She is so manipulative, jealous, hypocritical - BACKSTABBING and just... fucking crazy! The things she did and say just wanted... ugh... Put it simple.

Dana = Thor.

Dana, meet Hulk... Hulk meet - o.o

Ah, I knew there was a reason why I love hulk! =D

This book didn't hold any conviction. Like Ethan knew how Dana was and when Kayla came to a conclusion he sugar coats it and say she was just angry. Dude, don't go saying how you know how a person is and when they prove you correct you go make fucking excuses for them!

And Kayla! When you stand up for yourself and speak your mind, dont fucking say how 'maybe i was too hard on her?' or use that whole best friend fuckary like a damn cushion to comfort you!

CONVICTION IS NEEDED!!!

I hated how they were stressing this whole best friend thing. Their little definition of bff is fucked so badly, it's...<_<

ARGH!!!

It's pissing me off because I recently lost a bff over something similar and it just fucks with me! I can't stand when am being accuse of something am not, or if I don't clear up a situation... so when i do blow up - it's within good reason. KAYLA YOU NEED TO HANDLE SHIT LIKE ME!! x3

Hence the whole situation with Kayla, Dana, Ethan and even his brother was fucking stupid.

There :D

I said it! ^_^

Fucking. Stupid. :)

However:

I did LOVE Ethan (the Christmas present he gave her was sooooo sweet!!)

I hated Trevor (Ethan's bro) but towards the end, I understood him, I accepted that and I liked him. Plus he gave it to Dana goooooooood. Fucking love him for that.

The idea, the reality of it is there but the execution of this book was duuuuuumb.

Excuses were given where it wasn't suppose to be handed out.

Communication was dashed away when it was needed (but i guess the author needed a longer story n thought adding water to soup would be amazing (:)

Standing your ground? Half the time that wasn't even a thought for those dwindle headed idiots....

Actual Rating: 4.25

This was a great read. It was better than the short story, well for me it was. It did not disappoint. The chemistry between the main characters was great. I thought the ending was new and different. I like Kayla, she is the girl who doesn't want to fail. I also like Ethan because he is confident and handsome. I thought Dana was a self-absorbed little spoiled brat who doesn't know how to be someone's friend. Trevor needs to grow up a bit and has to stop acting like an idiot. I am interested to see what happens in Book 3. Can't wait! Hope it gets better!

Zoey says

Her and her friend get in a fight. They break up. They get back together. He meets her parents on Christmas. Her and her friend break up

Joanna R says

A really anti climax! It wasn't written well, lots of grammatical errors. The characters were developed well, hence the 3* but the conclusion wasn't really concluded. I felt a bit short changed. 3*

Karen says

This could have been a better book. I don't think the story was really fleshed out well. No build up to their attraction. The ending fell flat. And the character of Dana wasn't fully developed well. A decent idea that should have had more to it.

Lissa Smith Reads'~Bookaholics Bookshelf Reviews says

Again I find myself utterly shocked at the high rating this series is getting. Betrayed was a bit longer than its predecessor, however for me it gave off the feeling of a fifth grader masquerading as an adult trying to write adult literature with an erotic touch.

I just couldn't get past the astronomical use of 'I said, He said and I said, She said' REPEATIVELY within the same text. That said the plot has some serious potential, it does but ONLY with some careful editing, filling in and rounding of the characters.

Will I finish this trilogy? After waging war with myself taking an entire day to read two short stories, I will have to pass. However, if I run across someone who has bothered to read the final installment I may ask how it ends if I remember.

Samantha Fleming says

First of all I was so glad how things between Kayla and Ethan went. Second, Dana is one cold, hearted bitch. Third, I just want to give Trevor a hug, he has had the worst life iv'e heard of and I wish he was real so I be his friend. This is one great author, the story-lines felt real.

Maria says

I liked Betrayed and gave it 4.5 stars. Ethan & Kayla complemented each other well and had a mature relationship. They had love & respect for one another.

Wendy Jackson says

This is the follow up to The Professor novella. The Name says it all, Someone is going to be betrayed, someone is going to betray. Who's telling the true, who's lying? Well, you have to read it to find out. This was a quick enjoyable read, with some sexy thrown in. I really liked how the Author told the story from each persons POV, it really let you get into their heads and know what they are going through and felling. I really enjoyed this story and I'm looking forward to the next installment.
