Picture Book

Bland, N. (2013). The very brave bear. Lindfield, N.S.W.: Scholastic Australia.

Bear and Boris Buffalo are competing with each other to find out who is the bravest. They race across a racing river, cover themselves with bees, and climb the tallest tree. Then they come across a very scary cave and both of them are scared to enter. a loud ROAR sounds from the cave sending Boris and Bear running in fear. Out from the cave exits a tiny tree frog who invites them into his cave.

Have the class draw what they're scared of and create a solution to why they're scared of what they're scared of and have them apply it.

Bear is back for another adventure. While picking berries, Bear is challenged by Boris Buffalo to see who is the bravest among them. Climbing trees and rolling down hills, they match one another, step for step. The big challenge before them would have to be a scary cave. Who will take the leap and show off their bravery?

Read and see for yourself! Neo enjoys this stories, which mix a little action with some great rhymes. We have made our way through the series (or most of it) and things keep getting better. We'll keep an eye out for more so that we can read and share them with others!

Super cute book about a bear and a water buffalo trying to prove who is the bravest - would be a great one for competitive little boys - also for kids who get scared of the unknown

I received this book free from goodreads giveaways in exchange for a review.

Bear and Boris Buffalo try besting each other to see who is the bravest. Some of the things they test each other's bravery with are climbing to the top of a tall tree, tumbling down a steep hill, and crossing a raging river.

The story is told in rhyming verse that is perfect for read aloud with young children. They will enjoy searching for the little orange frog on each page. The illustrations throughout the book are funny and colorful.

I liked looking for the frog on each page :-)

Excellent sequel where the bear tries to prove he's braver than a buffalo, until they are both trumped by a *SPOILER REDACTED*. My kid actually was so good at remembering the story after the first read he mentioned the *SPOILER REDACTED* ending when the *SPOILER REDACTED* appeared on an earlier page.

One gripe: why does the buffalo get a name but not the bear? So bearist.

this book was adorable it is fun for children because the bear and the buffalo do silly things to prove they are brave and it all has rhymes so it is fun to follow along. the bear was startled by the buffalo and he acted like he wasn't then they both went on a journey to find the most brave thing to do to prove one another that they were brave in the end they both were scared of a roar that came from a cave it turned out to be a frog and they were both equally brave as the other

I loved how well Nick Bland works with rhyme. He has no excess words nor forced rhyme. There's plenty of action and a very nice ending. Of course, great illustrations, don't hurt, either.

A like that Froggy makes a subtle appearance on each page.
