Would be a great bedtime book for the farm or tractor obsessed child.

I purchased this book for my grandson-to-be and I am so glad that I did. We are a farming family and so the title of this book called out to me. I purchased it without knowing anything about it other than the tractor. I must admit I was hesitant because the cover tractor is red (and we are a John Deere establishment) but was happy to see that the illustrator has a green combine; therefore, things even out. LOL The storyline is about a little boy saying goodnight to various farming implements, machinery, and farm animals in a rhyming verse. It took me back to when I read "Goodnight Moon" to my little ones. I cannot wait to share this adorable book with my grandbaby. I know it will be a favorite. Thank you to Michelle Robinson, author.

Elaine Mullane says

This has quickly become by son's new favourite bedtime read. He brings it to us every night and loves pointing out the tractor on every page (we're obsessed with tractors right now!).

The beauty of this book is similar to that of Goodnight Moon. It focuses on the repetition of the word "goodnight", following a little boy as he says goodnight to all of his favourite farm yard animals and vehicles. This technique is so helpful in a bedtime routine and getting your little down to sleep.

The illustrations are adorable, the rhyming is lovely, and there are some animal sounds thrown in which my son loves to hear. All in all a wonderful bedtime book, particularly for those tiny humans who love farms and tractors!
