Sandra says

My oldest daughter loves the movie and enjoys the colorful pictures in the book.

Sarah Adamson says

A really nice condensed version of the Disney story about Rapunzel. Nice use of language, nice simple and calm explanations for everything that happens.

Loreto says

Received this as a late Christmas present, and loved it. The art style is lovely, just added to my excitement for the new sequel and series coming this year!

Nikki says

This short book tells the whole story of Tangled. The illustrations were not very good and they did not look like the movie. The story was choppy and seemed to jump around a lot. Some children who really loved the movie might like this book but overall I would not recommend it to anyone or give it to little children to read.

McKenna says

I got this with the movie when we bought it and LOVED it as much as the movie!!!

Lauren says

I loved what Disney turned this fairytale into! The story was really interesting and the characters are fantastic. I especially loved Flinn.

Mellanie C says

Retelling of the popular movie.

Tortla says

A sweet little novelization of the movie, which reminded me of the nice little details they kept from the original version (like Rapunzel's healing tears). And it didn't have the less-than-forgiveable male narration that the movie had.

Marjan says

One of my favorite disney stories

Sarah - All The Book Blog Names Are Taken says

A nicely condensed version of the movie that my little lady loves so much, it rivals her love of Frozen. "Punz, Fin Rier, and Mas" are pretty much her favorite characters ever. The artwork is a little too off for me but she enjoys it nonetheless and that's all that matter.

Dimity says

Buying this for my kid's easter basket is another concession to her general disinterest of fairy tales in non-Disney form. (Which is probably partially due to my inability to find other adaptations that are simple enough for the fruit fly attention span of a 3 year old.) It's a pretty decent quick and dirty adaptation of the movie minus the "frying pan as a weapon" theme.

Bree says

This is a sweet summary of the Disney movie Tangled. My 3 year old loves the movie and therefore loves this book and wants us to read it to her over and over.

Taylor Laird says

Tangled is a modern day Rapunzel story. It follows along with the traditional Rapunzel story that has been known for years. There are many different takes on the Rapunzel, but this one is one that many kids know of today because of the common Disney movie. There are a few slight differences between Tangled and Rapunzel. In Rapunzel, the man who rescues her is a prince, where as in Tangled, it is a thief. Also, once Rapunzel in Tangled cuts her hair it is brown where as in the older Rapunzel, her hair still stays golden blonde.

Despite the differences, the themes that have to stay present in a Rapunzel story is that of a Damsel in Distress. A young girl has to be locked in a tower, and the only way to get into the tower is that of her letting her long hair down and that person would climb up her hair into the window. It just so happens that a man spots a witch climbing up the Rapunzel's hair and becomes intrigued with the long, blonde-haired beauty and sets out to save her.

Rapunzel, a long-lost princess, lives isolated in a tower with Gothel, whom she believes is her mother. Gothel had kidnapped Rapunzel when she was a baby because of her magical golden hair that kept her young. She knew Rapunzel's magical hair, if cut, would turn brown and lose its magic. Every year on Rapunzel's birthday, her kingdom sends thousands of lanterns into the sky wishing their lost princess would return. On her eighteenth birthday, Rapunzel asks Gothel to let her see the floating lights, but Gothel says no because the world is full of dangers.

Meanwhile, thieves led by Flynn Rider steal the tiara of the missing princess from the castle and are chased by the kingdom guards. During the chase, the lead guard's horse, Maximus, is separated from his rider and continues the search for Flynn on his own. Flynn outwits his accomplices by taking the tiara; he abandons them and stumbles upon Rapunzel's tower. Once inside the tower, Flynn is knocked unconscious by Rapunzel with a frying pan. She hides Flynn and his satchel.

When Gothel returns, Rapunzel requests a special paint for her birthday instead. Gothel leaves for a three-day journey to bring the gift. Then Rapunzel makes a deal with Flynn: a journey to the "lights" in exchange for the tiara. Flynn attempts to make Rapunzel end their journey by taking her to the Snuggly Duckling Parlor. It is full of Viking thugs, but they are charmed by Rapunzel.

Gothel sees Maximus riderless and worries someone will find Rapunzel; she returns to the tower to find Rapunzel gone. Meanwhile, the guards invade the tavern, but the thugs help the pair escape. The pursuit ends at a dam, which Maximus caused to collapse. Flynn and Rapunzel are trapped in a flooding cave. Believing he's about to die, Flynn admits his true name: Eugene Fitzherbert. Rapunzel admits she has magic hair that glows when she sings. When it glows, they find a way out. Later around a campfire, Rapunzel heals Eugene's cut with her magic hair. When Eugene goes to gather firewood, Gothel secretly meets Rapunzel. Gothel tells Rapunzel that Eugene doesn't care for her, he only wants the tiara; giving her the satchel, Gothel insists that Rapunzel test Eugene by giving it to him.

The next morning, Maximus confronts Eugene, but to Eugene's dismay Rapunzel befriends the horse. The three arrive at the kingdom and that night Eugene takes Rapunzel to see the lanterns. There, Rapunzel gives Eugene back his satchel. Eugene spies his former accomplices and leaves Rapunzel waiting as he gives them the tiara back. However, the pair knock him out, tie him on a boat and sail him across the lake. They reveal Eugene's "betrayal" to Rapunzel as they attempt to kidnap her for her hair's power, but Gothel rescues her and they return to the tower. Later, Eugene is arrested and sentenced to death. Maximus brings The Snuggly Duckling thugs to rescue Eugene, and horse and rider race to the tower.

From various clues she finds during her adventure, Rapunzel realizes she is the long-lost princess and attempts to flee the tower. Gothel binds her, and when Eugene arrives, Gothel stabs him. Rapunzel swears to keep fighting Gothel unless she is allowed to heal Eugene's wound. Gothel agrees but before she heals him Eugene cuts Rapunzel's hair short with a piece of broken mirror. Rapunzel's hair turns brown and loses its magic. Gothel rapidly begins to age; while delirious, she trips and falls from the tower turning into dust. Eugene slowly dies in Rapunzel's arms. As she cries over his body, a teardrop filled with her magic lands on his cheek and revives him. Back at the kingdom the royal family has a tearful reunion and the king and queen pull Eugene into their embrace. Years later, Eugene and Rapunzel are married. Along the way the pub thugs
