The hottest and shortest in the series thus far, Tiffany Reisz had me staying up late to finish this baby!

In this episode, the assault side plot goes by the wayside, which I was thankful for, because, let's face it, we are reading this serial for the chemistry between Nora and everyone else, not for the suspense. Instead, we get a little Soren drama and a lot of hot, delicious BDSM lovin' between Nora and that yummy military man, Lance.

The story felt much longer than 25 pages. It was exciting and well developed, I think the best in the "Last Good Knight" serial thus far.

The assailant has now been detained so there is no need for Lance to be Nora's bodyguard anymore. They resume their D/s relationship and waste no time getting the kink on ;)

I liked that we got to see more of Nora's feelings & emotions as opposed to her usual blunt, confident self. This was probably my least favorite out of the series yet still so, so good! Maybe it's because this fourth part made me realize I only have one more until this series is finished.

The attacker has been slayed and there are no restrictions on Lance and Nora's relationship. These two waste no time flogging, restraining and even...

"She expected him to say Please kiss me or Please fuck me. Either wish would have been immediately granted. Instead, in a voice low and hungry he whispered, "Please make love to me."

All the while Soren is never to far away...

"I've been a Domme for two years. I'm not ready to give this up yet. I'm just finding out who I am finally."

"Mine," Soren said. "You are mine. That's who you are."

What will the future hold for Lance and Nora?

"I'm going to cuff you to my bed. Then I'm going to decorate the front of your body with a set of welts and bruises to match the set on your back. And then I'm going to climb on your cock and ride it until it breaks off. You have any objections to that plan?"

The Last Good Knight Part IV: Fit to Be Tied is the hope of more and the possibility of being a savior. In this we see the turmoil brewing, wanting so much to move on, to belong, to dare I say it love...but there is an underlying sense of sadness, like deep down they know the truth. This series has a way of sucking you in and not letting you go, making you feel everything along the way.

This story takes place three years before The Siren and two years after Nora left Søren.

I've said in one of my previous reviews for this serial that each part had something special that made me like it, so here is why I liked Part IV...

After the good news came from Kingsley, Nora and Lance wasted no time in continuing where they left off when they were in her dungeon. Cue kinky times which once again proved Lance is a sub any Mistress would be lucky to have. He is just... so... dreamy...

"Mistress, I want to be nothing but good to you."

However, just as I was starting to root for Nora and Lance, HE knocked on the door - Søren. And damn if at that moment I didn't want Nora to just kick Lance to the curb just so Søren wouldn't get hurt. (Sorry, Lance.) Ah, the conversation Nora and Søren had on her porch in forty-degree weather...

"This isn't running." ... "This is standing. Standing and living my life. I'm not your property anymore. I submitted to your from the age of fifteen to twenty-seven. That's twelve years. I've been a Domme for two years. I'm not ready to give this up yet. I'm just finding out who I am finally.”

“Mine,” Søren said. “You are mine. That’s who you are.”

“And you wonder why I’m not running back to you?”

And if that wasn't enough for my poor heart to take, they even brought up Kingsley. My darling Kingsley...

“Kingsley is finally moving on himself,” Søren said. “I have never seen him as happy as he is with Juliette.”

“Then you’ve never seen him with you.”

After all that, Lance with his magic hands made sure Nora felt better. I certainly felt better. And it was off to Part V...

The Bodyguard is not needed anymore so the "No Sex" rule has been lifted. The danger to Nora is no more and Lance is off the clock.

"I'm going to cuff you to my bed. Then I'm going to decorate the front of your body with a set of welts and bruises to match the set on your back. And then I'm going to climb on your cock and ride it until it breaks off. You have any objections to that plan?"

I can say that Nora definitely delivers all she promised to Lance. We get to see a glimpse of Nora and her soft side. Lance brings that out in her but Nora must decided to do something that may not be in her favor. But Nora in true Nora form goes all in...

"We're doing what I'm always doing- breaking the rules."

I must say that Soren did pay a little visit to Nora.....I just love when they are together-I can't help I just do ;-))

Mirjana DTR - Down to Read says

25 pages of pulling at your heartstrings and melting your panties....well done Tiffany Reisz.

Nora is falling for Lance, but what about Søren?...

Griffin saves the day by catching the crazy guy who was threatening the underworld after the violence he brought to their doorstep. This is good news for everyone, but even better for Nora because this means, Lance is no longer needed as her bodyguard and they can finally be free to play and do all the wicked things they have been craving to do but couldn't. He is the perfect Sub and she is having very intense feelings for him, so much so, that she is fantasizing about him wearing her collar...

On to the next book...

The Last Good Knight: An Original Sinners novella told in five parts.*

The Last Good Knight novellas take place 3 years before the start of The Siren. Nora has just turned 30 and is the most famous Dominatrix in The 8th circle!

"You're a weird Catholic."

"There is no other kind."

I just love Nora's sense of irony and sarcasm.

We see the relationship between Lance and Nora flourish and the reality of a situation where unfairness and people's attitudes are exposed..... I could sense something coming, but what?

The writing of Tiffany Reisz is an art form. Truly. She writes with an allure and a provocative flare that draws you into the world of Nora. Ms Reisz has a way of making me fall in love with her characters, every single one of them, and Lance is no exception. He's just divine.

In my opinion, The Siren should be experienced before anything else in The Original Sinners series...

My review of The Siren

I devoured The Original Sinners series in the following order...

The 4 full length books are essential reading and the novellas, not to be missed, in my opinion.

It worked beautifully for me!

Another fabulous installment in The Last Good Knight series! As always, Tiffany's writing is superb and she writes with perfect mix of kink and humor with some emotional stuff tied in.

Nora and Lance are finally off their bodyguard restrictions, thanks in large part to my guy, Griffin. Now they are free to have some fun...

Not only do we get the hot scenes with Lance and Nora, but we watch them become a little more emotionally attached. And we even get a quick visit from Soren.

“I’m just finding who I am, finally.”

?“Mine,” Soren said. “You are mine.”

I adored the way it ended. It just solidifies why Nora is one of my favorite heroines EVER!

”Will you get in trouble for this?”

?“Yes, big trouble.”

Can't wait to read the last installment! I hope Nora is able to pull this off!

Kingsley's news at the end of part III ends up giving Nora and Lance the okay to resume their sexual escapades. The feelings side of things is still getting to Nora and Lance is making her question where this is going and if she could make him hers.

"Please what?"

She expected him to say Please kiss me or Please fuck me. Either wish would have been immediately granted.

Instead, in a voice low and hungry he whispered, "Please make love to me."

Nora didn't have a snappy comeback for that. She had no words at all.

We get a little more Søren and Nora time, but it's definitely not roses. It did, however make me love him even more. It's been awhile since Nora broke things off with him, but their occasional romps seem to take their toll - not that that stops either of them.

"I'm not ready to give this up yet. I'm just finding out who I am finally."

"Mine," Soren said. "You are mine. That's who you are."

The ending left me feeling giddy about where things will end up for Lance. I love what Nora is about to do for him and I just hope it works!

Nora realizes that she holds the key that could help Lance, give him everything he wants and might just allow her to keep him. A thought that thrills and scares her. After just a few days Nora's feelings for this knight in shining armor has her fully captivated.

The writing in this series is utterly fantastic. The story is something that works perfectly. The series as a whole, not just this five part novella, but the entire Original Sinners, the novels, novellas and bonus scenes... they all just work so well. There are times when you can read something and you hit that point where the story has hit the end, it's expired. I am not sure if that point exist with this series and with these characters. Five years from now I can't imagine not having these characters to fall into.

A fabulous addition to this series. Nora is given a new dimension with each installment and you can't help but love her more than you did before.

Relationship wasn't a dirty word. Nothing to be afraid of. Not like it was monogamy.

Finally a 4!

So the mystery of who beat up Lady Natasha was resolved, rather disappointingly I might add, but then this series really didn't pose itself as a romantic-suspense novella. This of course effectively dissolves Lance's role as Nora's bodyguard, along with the stipulations Kingsley made which expectedly translates to a lot of kinky banging. Nora and Lance's Sunday afternoon of bliss however gets the requisite interruption from their polar realities: Soren and Lance's daughter.

In all of Reisz one hundred eighty-seven novellas from this series, my standing favourite has been The Gift but then it was also the first novella I read of hers right around the time I finished reading The Prince. Daniel was an intriguing character, not necessarily in the same league as Kingsley and Soren but one who I can believe Eleanor to foster fond feelings for. It takes a lot for me now to be convinced of Nora's chemistry with anyone else from Soren and Lance suffers from that syndrome unfortunately. I do wonder often if Nora's fascination of him is more akin to someone visiting the circus for the first time.

Most of the novellas written by Reisz between The White and Red Years depicts Nora's discontented heart, finding shelter with someone that offers something completely different from the lure of Soren's. And it was presented in a chronological spectrum that goes closer and closer to what is full-blown vanilla: from Daniel, to Lance, to finally, Wesley (there are other men in between of course, but those are the ones I only read of). If it's purely her adventurous spirit or her version of selfless love freeing herself from Soren out of her love for him, perhaps I'll never know. But here, I'm glad she was more fully-formed as the latter than the former.

"That was just sex."

"Say that again, I might believe you."

"It. Was. Just. Sex."

He raised his chin and looked down at her. With his eyes narrowed, he said softly, "No... still don't believe you."

It's the kind of love that hurts and heals in endless permutations. The kind that makes me regret the long wait for the next book after The Saint.

Part IV has Lance's bodyguard services no longer needed because the danger against Nora has been taken care of by Griffin. I got so excited when I saw Griffin's name mentioned. He's only mentioned but I'm still happy he was included in these 25 pages.

Nora is trying to help Lance solve a personal problem. In true Nora-fashion she is always willing to risk getting in trouble for the greater good.

"...will you get in trouble for this?"

"...yes, big trouble."

Ms. Reisz does a great job leaving the reader intrigued enough to want to read the next book. The reader will be able to choose if they want to wait a week and read them back to back or read one each day it is released. Personally I spread them out so I could see how it was waiting for the next book. I actually enjoyed the suspense of waiting for the next one. Kind of like waiting for Christmas morning.

The Last Good Knight series is interconnected with The Original Sinners series. The Last Good Knight takes place 3 years prior to The Original Sinners. Warning, if you read The Last Good Knight prior to The Original Sinners spoilers will be revealed.
