In this debut series, time travel is as natural a phenomenon as the ocean tides, the changing of seasons, and the perpetual motion of the Earth. There is no need for machines, devices, or any intervention from humankind to make it exist. It happens as elementally as the death of a star, as purely as the impetuous winds.

Every four and five years, invisible, time travel doorways open and close. Any person or creature caught within the magnetic, gravitational pull awakens incoherently to a future world.

In book one, a 19th century runaway slave awakens in a New England marsh in the year 2014. She must choose to return to the past, or else history and the country as we know it will be forever changed.

Book two explores one of the most famous and mysterious disappearances of the 20th century. He awakens in the year 2012. When faced with the realization of what happened, will he escape his new prison, or will his dream of reuniting with his kids forever taunt him in a new life of captivity?
