Wardiah says

Eric lost his permission slip to go to the zoo! Cam Jansen helps him remember where the last place he had it.

Dolly says

We really enjoyed this book in the Cam Jansen series. I like that there are books for beginning readers (Young Cam Jansen) and books for more intermediate readers (Cam Jansen). Not only are the more advanced books longer and have more sophisticated vocabulary, but they are also more suspenseful and complicated too. In these books for younger children, the mystery is much simpler and it's by a process of elimination and retracing their steps that she and Eric are able to solve the mystery. This is a good way to teach younger children to solve their own mysteries and find their own "missing zoo notes." And the Memory game at the end is always fun, too.

Elizabeth S says

It is so nice to read mystery books for the beginning reader where the mystery is realistic (Eric lost his zoo note) and yet still a challenging mystery. Even better, it is a mystery that the reader can solve if the reader pays attention!

Morgan Cummings says

Mystery

A unique feature of this book is that the word "click" is bolded and in red ink

This book could be used for grades K-2

Meredith says

May or may not use for a mystery introduction lesson for 2nd grade. May have to read others in the series for a better "mystery."

Megan Haas says

Cam Jansen and the Zoo Note Mystery is appropriate for Kindergarten through second grade. With this book being a mystery, the author gives readers many chances to solve the mystery without completely giving the answer away until the end. This aspect keeps readers engaged because they want to know what happens.

Justin says

The animals in the zoo were cool.

Kelly says

Corbin said he didn't like this one as much as the rest in the series.

Marlee says

This series is easy, fast, and fun. This book was super easy for my children to solve (they are 9 and 6). However, they like that these books are solvable. They've been really into mysteries and can go through several of these books in one sitting. They also love that there is always a picture to test your memory with, just like Cam.

Kaymcwilly says

Good book

Paul says

I liked it because they couldn't find the not because it was in his lunchbox. They looked on the bus and in the jacket, but they found it in the lunchbox and Eric could go to the store.
Cam's real name is Jennifer, but they call her "The Camera," Cam for short for her great memory. She can take pictures with her brain and remember.
