Jan says

Good short story in the series. Not as light and fluffy as the series typically is, it is dedicated to Viet Nam vets.

Valerie says

Although Granny Apples is in this, it is a spin off of the original series. It has Jeremiah Jones as the detective and seer of ghosts. It is a good story, and decent mystery. I think that it has possibilities for a series on its own.

Good story for the holidays

This is a great series, and this story packs a lot of plot in just a few pages. It's a very good mystery with a wonderful cast of characters. Loved the range of emotions, and the sense of optimism at the end.

Kay says

This was a great short read! I enjoyed the new characters in the book but love when Granny Apples shows up. The story was a little darker than the previous books with Granny in them. I always look forward to new books in this series!

Dawn Frazier says

I loved this book! I flew right through it, could not put it down! Looking forward to reading the others in this series that I haven't read yet.

Alison (Lady Coffin) S says

Entertaining Holiday themed mystery novella

Connie says

This is another fantastic book in the Granny Apples series. There is usually a chuckle or 2 in this series, however this book opens our eyes to some of the sadness occurring on Skid Row. Very well written. The reader could read this book without the others in the series, BUT you won't want to.

Mary says

This was a fun book with Granny Apples helping solve another mystery with Emily, and Phil. In a more up to date setting. The first book they were helping Granny solve her husband's murder from the 1700s. This time they are in Los Angeles in real modern time, helping Red find out what happened to Mistletoe Mary.

The story was a quick read and it is well written. Well worth the time to read.

Sue Ross says

It was really great connecting with Granny Apple in this book. This book takes you to the homeless areas of Los Angeles with Jeremiah, a private detective and retired police officer. When one of the homeless men continue to rant about Mistletoe Mary being dead, Jeremiah takes it upon himself to find out the truth. What he finds is shocking and sad.

I love the Granny Apple series and can't wait for the next one to come out.

Mark Baker says

Retired cop turned PI Jeremiah Jones is asked to help out a vet on skid row in Los Angeles. This vet is ranting to anyone who will listen that Mistletoe Mary has been murdered. Jeremiah thinks that Mary's ghost may be visiting and trying to get justice. Is he right? Can he team up with Granny to figure out what is happening?

While this book is set during December, it's not your typical cozy since it is set on skid row and includes many of the types of characters you'd expect to see down there. But don't let that stop you from reading it. Being a novella, the pace never lags. Yet the shorter length doesn't mean we get shallow characters – they are as strong as ever in one of Sue Ann's stories.

NOTE: I received a copy of this novella in exchange for my honest review.

Though it's darker and grittier than the previous "Ghost of Granny Apples" mysteries I've read, I enjoyed this Christmas novella at least as much as I did those cozier tales. I enjoyed meeting PI Jeremiah Jones for the first time, as I have not yet read The Ghost in the Guacamole, in which he is introduced. And it was fun to have the irrepressible Granny Apples show up to help out and liven things up. I loved the optimistic, hopeful ending, which more than made up for the bleakness of the Skid Row setting.

A Jaffarian Change of Venue?

Emma and Granny, minor characters? How can that be?

In this murder mystery, the author seems to have tried her hand at a new style of writing. In my humble opinion, as reader with a life long love for mysteries, she was successful with great finesse. A well known, irascible hooker is missing from her L.A. skid row neighborhood. A well liked, elderly homeless man seems to have gone off his rocker. Enter a retired police officer, now a P.I. He's been asked by a friend to check into things among the homeless community and so the action begins.

With this mystery, Sue Ann Jaffarian shows a style of writing that I found reminiscent of Agatha Christie. That is high praise from me. If the author should happen to read this review. ..Congratulations! I hope more is to come

Life isn't perfect in sunny California just ask ex detective and now private investigator, Jeremiah Jones. Years earlier when he came back from the army he was homeless and lived on the streets of LA but was lucky enough to get a job with the police department. Now as a retired cop he does his best to help others who are in the same terrible living situation as he once was.

Dwayne Burkett, known on Skid Row as Bucket, is elderly and he's totally out of it because of alcohol and his horrible life. The only thing that seems to keep him calm is his little dog who is very old and looks like he will die very soon.

Lately Bucket seems to be more out of it than usual. He says that the ghost of another street person, Mistletoe Mary, is dead and her ghost is haunting him saying that she was murdered. No one believes Bucket and just assumes that he's has been drinking way too much. But Jeremiah Jones does believe that something odd is going on and a ghost just might be involved.

Jeremiah has a unique talent. He can see and speak to ghosts like his friend, Emma Whitecastle. The two met on a previous case where a ghost was haunting a restaurant and they soon became friends. Jeremiah has also had the pleasure of meeting Emma's great, great, great, grandmother, Ish Reynolds, also known as Granny Apples, Granny for short. Granny has been haunting and helping Emma, who also dabbles in investigating murders, for years.

Jeremiah isn't sure if Mistletoe Mary is really dead and starts asking other people who live on the street if they've seen Mary recently. No one has and now Jeremiah does believe that someone has killed her and that her ghost is indeed asking Bucket to help her. But why would Mary go to Bucket and not someone who isn't a little out of his head? Jeremiah doesn't know but he wants to find out what's going on and to also help Mary rest in peace. With the help of Granny Apples, and a few other friends, Jeremiah starts investigating the murder.

“The Ghost of Mistletoe Mary” by Sue Ann Jaffarian is a novella based on her amusing Granny Apples Series. It’s wonderful to see Granny leave her great, great, great, granddaughter, Emma, every once in awhile to help other people who can see and hear her. Granny loves solving murders especially the stakeouts.

There are a few Granny Apples novellas and they’re all as interesting and as much fun as the longer Emma Whitecastle series. They’re short and can easily be finished in one day if you need something good to read before your next 300 page novel. Give one of them a try when you have a free few hours in your busy life.

Thank you Sue Ann for a fantastic Granny Apples mystery! I enjoyed learning more about Jeremiah. As usual, Granny added to the suspense and humor. Although this is a short novella, it brings a smile to my face to have more Granny Apples. I am a happy reader to have both full length novels and short novellas like this to read.
