The title and cover have literally nothing to do with the subject matter in this book. Randy is homesick for NYC - and why wouldn't she be? She lives in a converted barn in Bumfuck, Minnesota now. This book is essentially Randy considering moving to live with her music producer father back in the city while she entertains her friend from back home. Shenanigans ensue.

Rebel Rebel

PLOT: After finding out her mom (Olivia) has a chance to pursue her talent as a budding artist in Acorn Falls, Randy is faced with the Redecision to continue to live in Acorn Falls or go back to New York in June and live with her father. Especially after pressure from her best friend Sheck who comes to visit during Thanksgiving break.

My Thoughts:

*Why would you WANT to go to a party where you're not wanted? Invite some other girls (the other ones that aren't invited) and have your own cooler party. I never get the girls in books that want to go to the parties of people that treat them like their nothing. I'd be thinking SCREW YOU!

*Why would you drop out of school and give up on a talent (gift) because you meet a guy? It doesn't say Olivia was pregnant. Plenty of people go to school and pursue their passion at the same time. When I was in college I dated plenty, but I would have been out of my mind to think I was so in love with someone that I was going to drop it all for them. And just like Olivia learned the ones I thought I was so IN LOVE WITH no-where to be seen today!

*Isn't Acorn Falls also where the Get-Along-Gang lives?

*No pre-teen girl says hunk! I'm sorry. Grandmothers say hunk. This book wasn't written in 1950.

*I take it back. It is 1950. Checked, pleated, pants? On a guy? UMM NOO!

*Wearing all black is definitely not an uncool thing and it isn't a goth thing these days either.

*What's up with guys always falling all over themselves for blond (busty) blue-eyed chicks that act like b's?

RATING: 6. There was a good message in this. The message was that home isn't just where you "fit in". Home is where the people who love you are. I didn't think that much of Sheck. He was a real jerk over half the book putting off Acorn Falls because it wasn't as good as New York. But I liked the tobogganing scene. Surprisingly it sounded like fun to me. I did something similar but with a cardboard box in the snow when I was a little girl and lived with my mom in Tuskegee. I bet tobogganing is such a rush! I'd love to try it!

these books were like reading a diary each book was different though it was like you were in school again.

I am keeping a list of the horror movies mentioned via Randy in this series:

Pumpkinhead, that holy grail of VHS horror Lunchmeat, Rabid Grannies and I Spit on Your Grave (which I saw at fifteen and found vaguely traumatizing...my guess is the ghost writer would rather have been cranking out Point horror, am I right?)

I'll be adding to this.

Halloween.

all books from this serial were with me in my childhood and puberty-time ;) and in that time it was great. One time...I will read it with my daughters
