Another little gem, I love the kid, he is so funny and his attempt at hypnotism on the first page or so had me giggling away picturing it!!

Again, a few lovely sentiments from Jessica Park along with her fantastic humour.

Loved this just as much as the first book, though not sure if the kid will be more embarrassed at some of his entries in them both (as i think is the plan for when he's older) or proud and completely sure of how much his mum loves him but either way, brilliant!!

This is the second What the Kid Says collection from Jessica Park and it was just as great of a read as the first one.

At the expense of sounding like I'm copying my review of the first collection, What the Kid Says was a hilarious and touching read from beginning to end. Park is able to take her everyday conversations with her son, and bring a smile to the fan of readers.

I was able to fly through this little book in a sitting and even in its brevity, it'll stay with me for some time. Through the humor, there are moments of hope for a child's future, fear of missing his/her childhood, and many more moments that parents tend to cherish. I think it's that dual play on emotions that turn this book into such a great read. You might even end up wanting a mom like Park!
