The Lords Of Silence (Warhammer 40,000) Chris Wraight

The Cadian Gate is broken, and the Imperium is riven in two. The might of the Traitor Legions, kept shackled for millennia behind walls of iron and sorcery, has been unleashed on a darkening galaxy. Among those seeking vengeance on the Corpse Emperor's faltering realm are the Death Guard, once proud crusaders of the Legiones Astartes, now debased creatures of terror and contagion. Mighty warbands carve bloody paths through the void, answering their lord primarch's call to war. And yet for all their dread might in arms, there is no escape from the vicious legacies of the past, ones that will pursue them from the ruined daemon-worlds of the Eye of Terror and out into the smouldering wastes of the Imperium Nihilus.

Read It Because

The Death Guard have returned to prominence with the return of Mortarion and their fabulous model range, and Chris Wraight's previous work with them (in his Space Wolves novels, notably) makes him the perfect person to delve into their particular darkness.

Andrey Nalyotov says

Well, it was a long time since a proper review. But this time Chris Wraight wake me up from my stupor with a tale which should be an example how a PROPER Black Library novel should be written.

It has everything - amazing characters, who are in a general word a 'bit evil', but you want to applause them! It has amazing void war snippets - and even if I always want more, I can definitely say the snippets approach was masterfully done.

It has a straight and defined story presented through a sliced timespan approach - which totally works in this case.

And even though it is a W41K - setting which gave us a very contradictory lore with Gathering Storm and appearance of Primaris and Cawl (sigh), it's story feels more as a true grimdark and partly 'fun' emergence for W40K, than a lot of newly released Dark Imperium or Indomitus Crusade stories (which by precondition should be a more grimdark and scary due to the Cicatrix Maledictum nad broken galaxy space).

And most of all The Lords of Silence it's a poetic approach to writing by which Chris Wraight is so famous now. It has a slow approach and a lot of particularly detailed descriptions.

But if you read Chris The Carrion Throne you would already know how GODLIKE you reading time would be.

Do you need to read this novel to know the important events of W41K which are happening now? Nope.

Do you need to read it to get a proper long missed Death Guard focused book? - Hell YES, YOU SHOULD!

It is a more DG 'loving' book than all the Horus Heresy DG Legion books released to date!

But most of all - YOU should read it, because it is the best Black Library book of 2018 so far.

And probably the best praise for an author would be this - I never liked pets in W40K. Never. But after I closed the last page I do want to have a Little Lord hobbling about my feets.

Chris - you have written a Godlike novel, which can't be praised enough. From the bottom of my heart - deepest thank you!

And now a long wait for the second novel in a trilogy (hopeful breathing) would commence :)
