Great book as always with Tamara Philip. What I really enjoyed about this book was not only the romance, but with seeing Clarissa's relationship with her best friend December. They way that she admires her friends reaction to stardom, the conversations they have, dealing with a stalker!!! It just makes the reader feel like they are a part of the friendship and Hollywood.

Enough about the friendship though, this time around it's Clarissa's (December's best friend) chance at love, but as we can all relate to, love is never easy or come at exactly the moment that you're expecting it. I'd have to say there is quite a bit of suspense in this book and if you're up for a wild ride, this is the book for you.

When I read Tamara Philip's debut story, The Trouble with Playing Cupid, I really enjoyed it and was surprised at the great writing style for a newbie. However, I am now totally blown away by the amazing improvement in writing and style. The story follows Tom and December, two famous people in their own right, who fall in love, but have the pitfalls of fame and fortune to contend with. Clarissa, December's best friend comes into her own in this book and I can possibly see other books coming out that follow some of the other interesting characters in the series. There is also a bonus of another short story which is a lively seasonal tale of love. Well worth the read. Well done Ms Philip.
