Charity work can be murder! It's Thanksgiving and Joseph Tyler, one of the members of Cindy's church, has organized a new charity that provides homeless people with rescue dogs to love and care for. But one by one, the homeless recipients are being murdered and their dogs stolen. Could an overly competitive millionaire with his prize-winning pooches and a grudge be behind the crimes? Or could it be someone much closer to Joseph who has something sinister to hide? Cindy and Jeremiah must rush to find a killer before he strikes again.

I liked the book, the mystery was interesting and I didn't know who the killer was until the very end. I thought there were a bit too many characters but I enjoyed the interplay between Cindy, the church secretary; Jeremiah, the rabbi and Mark, the detective. I read this book out of order (it is book #2) since my library didn't have the first book in its collection and I may have missed initial character development and interplay between them. I have ordered the first book from Amazon and will hold off reading the next one. That being said, there were some good "red herrings" but also some unanswered parts of the mystery, thus the 3 stars.

3 1/2 stars. This is a quick, enjoyable read. There's nothing earth-shattering here, but it is pleasant and clean with fun characters and a good cozy mystery. This is the second book in the series, but I got it free for kindle, so I read it first. Now I'll have to go back and read the first book.

Cathi Cantrell says

Deliciously satisfying mystery/suspense series (this was the 2nd in the series) of which I am totally enthralled! What a treat to find something VERY similar to my previous other two favorite book series, that of Sue Grafton's ABC - Z mystery collections with lead character, Kinsey Millhone AND Janet Evanovich's Stephanie Plum novels "One for the Money" through Twenty-Four (I think)! A cleanly written exciting suspenseful page-turning marathon of wonderful, well thought out situations and characters with twists & turns you don't see coming! Quite refreshing, really! I'm hooked!

This is a wonderful cosy mystery series. The last book took place during Easter and is referenced many times. This case takes place during Thanksgiving. The mystery itself wasn't really up my alley as it was strongly dog themed, dogs are being stolen while the owners are killed. But I love all the characters and the interplay between them. Being a cosy there is a lot of romantic comedy present. The pacing at the end was very well done drawing me into the tension and excitement. I was also incorrect about any of my possible solutions to the mystery and I love it when that happens. I own #3 on kindle so will definitely read the next book.

Pretty good, will probably try the third one. Have to figure out Jeremiah piece.

On the one hand, it's a cozy mystery with some vague semblance of plot starring a plucky church secretary and a rabbi. On the other hand, I'm not sure Viguie has ever spoken to a rabbi. Or any Jewish person even remotely faithful. Or Googled "how Jews talk about G-d". Because I'll tell you, how Jeremiah does it ain't standard!

Jerry says

An enjoyable sequel; now, if I could just get my hands on the next one!

I wanted to give this series another chance. Unlike the first book, the mystery isn't as grizzly or disturbing, but the characters remain as flat as ever. I wanted to like the uncommon duo of the church secretary and the rabbi, but so little is revealed of them beyond their day-to-day jobs.

I still fail to see how this series is marketed as Christian mystery. Just because a couple of characters work in a church or synagogue, doesn't mean it's Christian. Even so, I know how to appreciate a good mystery. I thought the premise of the book was appealing. It twists on the Psalm 23 phrase, I shall not want. In the book, a wealthy man who owns prize showdogs, donates a few to homeless folks through a program that helps them care for themselves by learning to care for a pet. Something starts happening to the pets and people who own them. What's the connection? Who will be next?

The mystery itself was ok, but I expect more development, especially character wise. When I couldn't care, I was done.

Madeline says

Not enough Jeremiah.

This story really dragged for me! Cindy didn't really seem to do any sleuthing, but rather had important clues handed to her to pass along. There wasn't much interaction between Cindy and Jeremiah in this story, and I think the plot suffered for it. There were several red herrings in this, but I had to force myself to keep reading it. I'll give the series one last chance, but I don't hold out much hope for it.

I Shall Not Want is the second book in The Psalm 23 Mysteries series. The Psalm 23 Mysteries follows Protestant church secretary, Cindy Preston, and Rabbi Jeremiah Silverman as they stumble through murder mystery after murder mystery. The church and the synagogue stand next door to each other, and it seems to be by divine design that the two characters are pushed together for each mystery.

Cindy Preston loves Fridays; anything can happen on Friday. Unfortunately for her, this week the thing that happens is murder. Cindy stumbles over a murder mystery and a dog-napping when she happens upon a dead secretary. Her friend, Joseph Tyler, has organized a charity that pairs the homeless with a dog from the pound. On the day of the presentation of rescue dogs to their new owners, Joseph's secretary is murdered and his $20,000 puppy is stolen. This is the start of a series of unfortunate events as the recipients of the rescue dogs are murdered one by one and their dogs seem to just vanish. Meanwhile, Jeremiah deals with his own mystery as a dark figure from his past shows up dead on his front porch. Is his past coming to get him? Can he juggle the flu, keeping his mysterious past hidden, and being there to help Cindy when she gets into trouble? Will they prevent the deaths of the rest of the homeless participants and find the missing dogs? Find out by reading this enthralling book by Debbie Viguié.

This book started out good, and I was really getting into it. I was trying to figure out the mystery and then boom on the bottom of page 186, then again on the top of page 187 towards the end of chapter 14, there were two times where a character, to be blunt, cussed. In a Christian book?! Yes, they were words that are in the Bible, but they were definitely not used in the same manner. I was most definitely disappointed. If it weren't for that, this easily could've been a 3 or even 4 star book. I've come to expect it in non Christian books (I'm not excusing it in any way, I'm just saying it's sadly expected), but to be in a Christian book, that's ridiculous and highly upsetting. I have much higher standards for Christian books for obvious reasons. Can I not even trust Christian books any more? It's a sad world we live in. I heard so much praise for this author, and I liked the first book, and frankly I was enjoying this one until that. This was very sad to see...

NOTE: the words used in case you need to know were one instance of a and one of h

I'm getting really curious about what is chasing Jeremiah.

Julie Graves says

Cindy Preston is a secretary at her church. She is helping Joseph, a member of the church, put on a charity benefit. Joseph breeds dogs and this benefit is a project that he came up with to put dogs and homeless people together. Each homeless person that adopts a dog also receives a voucher that they can use to feed their new pet.

Cindy has just recently helped the police stop a serial killer. It seems that her luck with dead bodies is still following her around. When asked to go find Josephs assistant Derick she finds more than she bargained for. Derick has been murdered and Josephs prize dog is missing.

When several murders happen and the owners dogs are missing Cindy is once again forced out of her comfort zone much to Homicide Detective Mark's dismay. He and his partner Paul insist that Cindy stay out of the investigation, but that is hard for Cindy to do since bodies keep turning up everywhere she goes!

I really enjoyed the story. I didn't read the first novel in the series The Lord is my Shepherd, I think it would have helped with some background with characters. But it wasn't too hard to jump into this book and understand what was going on. Cindy has a caring heart that seems to give her a knack for getting into trouble. I found it funny that she doesn't like danger and throughout the book talked about taking risks and expanding her experiences yet she has helped catch a serial killer and now in this book keeps getting into pickles. Her foray into speed dating cracked me up! But she may have found a match, maybe we will see in the 3rd installment of the Psalm 23 Mysteries? A little bit of romance, a little bit of mystery and a lot of suspense I Shall Not Want was a fun read for me!

I obtained my copy FREE from Amazon several months ago. It is no longer offered for free.

This is book 2 in the Psalm 23 Mystery series. It is a stand alone cozy (but I would still recommend reading the first one) that once again involves Cindy the church secretary as a sleuth in the mysterious killings of dog owners and the stealing of their dogs. Jeremiah, the rabbi of the neighboring synagogue, again becomes Cindy's partner in detection. I love the humor and care that exists between the two of them. Enough twists, turns, and red herrings to keep me wondering who the killer was. The faith thread was somewhat light but overall a good cozy mystery.
