Alistair MacLean's Air Force One Is Down John Denis

-The most ingenious international criminal bent on revenge...

-Two men with the same name and the same face...

-And six of the most important men in the world aboard the President's plane...

Who pushed the button that destroyed Air Force One?

Why must everyone be killed?

Are they really dead?

In this game of deception only UNACO and its daring team can be trusted to join the gamble - and win.

Cheri says

decent

The plot line was fine, but the pacing was really choppy and a little difficult to follow. Will try another one.

Erik says

just...very...bad, and I don't say this too often about a book. Clearly not written by the man himself.

David Rivett says

OK but not one of his better books

Alistair MacLean is one of my all-time favorite adventure writers. The Guns of Navarone, Where Eagles Dare and Ice Station Zebra are hallmarks in war/espionage fiction. As I've been re-reading some of my favorites, I've come across Air Force One Is Down (1981). Although technically not written by MacLean, John Dennis based his story on a MacLean outline.

This smartly written thrill includes all the elements that make a great Cold War thriller. A rugged hero, a beautiful hero, dastardly villains (including a look-alike), sex, violence all amid a political backdrop. Even at 30-years-old, the issues involving Middle East oil men is still very relevant.

Granted, it's tough to recommend a book that's three decades old and "not really" written by the author, it's still worth a look.

Prince says

All tell and no show. A waste of time.

Wade Mercer says

Not what I was expecting... Haven't read any of his books in years. Really enjoyed The Guns of Navarone, Where Eagles Dare and Ice Station Zebra! Love his cold themes!

Mukunthan K says

Not as good as you would expect a Alistair MacLean

Micha? Kutya says

Disappointing. Very naive. Generic super villain which suppose to be a genius yet makes so many mistakes that allows his prisoners to escape. A generic male heroes which eventually win. A generic female hero which is described as a super agent yet achieves nothing except being rescued several time by male heroes. And I could not stand the idea of a director of a powerful international organisation who engages personally in a field.
