1305 A.D.

Being descended from great, though disgraced family, can be a greater curse than most. As a direct descendant of Simon de Montfort, Lady Gray de Montfort Serroux has lived her life with the axe of shame hanging over her head. Because of this, her marriage matches were limited and she wed a dishonorable man who widowed her when he was murdered in a gambling game.

Left with a young daughter to support, Gray and her daughter and her mother have been living in poverty. But now her daughter is approaching marriageable age and Gray's conniving, haughty mother plots to marry the girl to the first wealthy man who offers for her hand. Meanwhile, an army of mercenaries seeks shelter at Gray's crumbling castle. Their leader, Sir Braxton de Nerra, is a knight bannerette.

Not sworn to a single liege, he travels with his mercenaries and has accumulated a good deal of wealth fighting other people's battles. Taken with the beautiful Lady Gray even as the lady's mother tries to force the granddaughter upon him, Braxton finds himself drawn into the desperate life they lead at the Castle Erith. As Braxton and Gray fall in love, Gray's mother, the evil Constance, continues to wreak havoc, now aimed at the man who so desperately loves her daughter.

Join Braxton as he fights for his new home, his new family, and is finally forced into the ultimate act of self-sacrifice to save those he loves.

Belinda in Alabama says

Good story

I like to read Susan Leveque books. Her medieval characters and castle descriptions make me see it in my head. The romance is good and women are strong too. If you like historical romances, you'll like these books.

Happy Reading!

Loved it!

Liked this one despite the initial and quite lengthy tentativeness of the plot, leaving me wondering if it was going anywhere or had anywhere to go. True the cruel, old hag was introduced early but can you hang a story on her? It seems you can.

She, this wicked self-deceiving harridan, is the prime mover here, the initial cause of [nearly] all the action. Which meant that the 'main' characters were almost purely reactive. Which further meant the story was not entirely predictable. Which, to carry this along, meant the story was more enjoyable than it might have been. Who doesn't like a bit of a surprise now and then?

I simply cannot get enough of Kathryn Le Veques medieval romance books. I have very nearly read every single one out and I'm wondering when I finally finish the last of them if I'm going to be overly crushed and feeling such loss from finishing them all. I have honestly not read a book from any other author in quite some time and I read at least 1 of her books per week. They are just That Good! :)

I really loved this book! I even fall in love with the couple Dallas/Brooke before it even existed ^^

That certainly one of those books that I can read and reread as if the first time!

5***** Another great historical romance from Kathryn le Veque. What a lot of damage one interfering old lady can cause. The lady Constance is determined to regain her former status by selling her grand daughter to the highest bidder. The problem is the girl is already contracted The hero (or one of them because there are several in this story) is a mercenary knight who is hired to take the girl. The heroine is the girls mother who is trying to keep food in the bellies of her people. There are lots of battles and lots of love in this book. Several secondary characters to fall in love with too. A must read for anyone who likes historical romance.

Another wonderful story

The Falls of Erich is another wonderful read, I love how these characters are related so you recognized the family ties. I would recommend this book if you want a good read!

Another great medieval story written by Kathryn Le Veque! I can't get enough of her books filled with romance, chivalry and adventure. I loved her characters Braxton and Lady Gray in THE FALLS OF ERITH! Love will be at their rendez-vous but with its ups and downs. Will Braxton fight for his family? What will he do to save the ones he loves? The Hero is a mercenary but also a fair man, a beautiful knight! Another emotional story! A must to read if you are a fan of medieval historical romances. I recommend all of Ms. Le Veque's books, they are so captivating.

Liloshadow (ReNee) says

Great love story...about honor and sacrifice.

The hero Braxton in this love story, is a dream of a man. He isn't your typical young knight. He has lived quite a full life as a mercenary. That all changes when he meets the heroine Gray. Gray is very strong but weary after living such a sad life. It takes her a while to trust Braxton, but Braxton is the definition of honor... and his sacrifice at the end is breathtaking. The secondary characters are great as well there is even a secondary romance that comes into play.

If you love deep, emotional moving stories...check out this author..you won't be sorry.

Always enjoy this author

Who would not enjoy a story filled with action, love and hope for a better future. Two love stories in one. Can't ask for more than that.?

Excellent read

Again Kathryn Leveque, has brought history and romance alive, with her English knights. This was a very engaging story, with mother and daughter, and 2 handsome knights.

I AM NO SURE

I usually love Kathryn LeVeques books but this one fell short for me. I think there was not enough family interaction from Greys husband's family and homecoming was just ill-conceived. Sorry because I just adore her books.

The Falls of Erith turned out to be one of the better books I've read by LeVeque. Medieval stories are some of my favorites and she didn't disappoint in her descriptors, character development or historical accuracy. I especially enjoy her descriptions of the knights in their armor, their chargers, their armies.

Gray's life was abysmal. She was trapped with the nasty mother, annoying daughter, abject poverty, yet she kept working and showing what a selfless person she was. She never would have guessed the answer to a new life would be in the form of a knight in shining armor - literally.

I enjoyed the interesting twist of the nasty mother and her undoing. The daughter was annoying and I couldn't like her until after she was married and matured.

My favorite thing about the book that made it so unlike others in this genre was the fact Braxton and Gray actually talked to one another and didn't allow communication or lack of, to be an issue. So many other stories I've read, thinking if only they would talk to one another and not assume... But, then there might not be a story.

Not quite sure about this one

Almost done with all KLVs medieval romances but this one will be one of the few of hers that I dont quite like. One reason is that it feels disjointed and all over the place. I was not interested at all with the inclusion of Gray's daughter's love story and it took away from thr main plot. I also wish brooke's character development focused on her transformation from being a selfish brat to someone who wouldn't turn out to be like her grandma. Why on earth the book included gray's 15yr old "romance" was unpalatable to me esp since she isnt even someone a reader will like or adore later on. What a waste of pages which could have been focused on the main H and h.
