Steven Shinder says

Once again, the artwork is inconsistent. It looks like this is the THIRD art style in this arc. Way to make it all feel cohesive. The dialogue is also really off. I agree with Leia when she says that Luke is being dumb here.

Darren says

The story picked up the pace from the lead-in of Screaming Citadel #1 and Star Wars #31. What's more, the transitions between Mr. Aaron and Mr. Gillen's writing felt seamless (found Gillen's style to be a little more visceral in this particular issue - no spoilers!).

Ms. Broccardo's artwork did nothing to advance my enjoyment of the story; a noticeable step down from Mr. Checchetto (and Mr. Larroca).

Just my two cents.

Brandon St Mark says

Another good issue in the cross over! The art seemed kinda retro to me, and I liked it a lot, probably the best part of the issue honestly.

- Yay! Another Han cover!
 - Why is the artwork so different? They couldn't have the same artist for Star Wars and Doctor Aphra? I'm not a fan of this cartoony look.
 - I loved the classic Han moment when he says, "I've got a blaster." Ha!
 - I love that evil protocol droid. He cracks me up with his ruthlessness.
 - Those parasites are creepy things. They need to be exterminated.

I liked this issue a lot! although the drawing is not like the one in part II .. but I liked it nonetheless! I'm willing to read the previous 6 issues!

Spencer says

This was a fun issue but nothing particularly impressive apart from the art, which was easy on the eyes as the style looked a bit more traditional than the overly digital style in some of the other star wars comics.
